

Together, circular

UX Designer (m/w/d)

Concular is a circular economy start-up. We digitize materials in buildings to calculate the embodied carbon footprint and help to reduce it by recirculating materials to other buildings, manufacturers or industry partners. By that we are tackling a lot of problems in the construction sector such as emissions, waste, resource exploitation and more. We're working with most of the largest building owners, manufacturers and construction companies in Germany and will expand to other countries mid of next year.

Your Role

Understanding customer needs using UX methods like user research, mental models, service blueprint, customer journey map, personas, value proposition canvas, user flows and testing - as well as translating the results into actionable requirements for UI design and engineering.

Must-have: German language skills required: Level C1+

Tasks

- Discover user needs by user research
- Define customer journey and user flows, through touchpoint and application
- Test, collect and analyze user feedback
- Define requirements for the user interface design and product development
- Design delightful interactions between our products and users regarding usability and joy-of-use
- Adding guides to ensure a smooth learning experience

Your Profile

- A minimum of 3 years of experience as a UI/UX Designer within SaaS environment
- Experience in data visualization
- Experience in UI topics like user research
- Technical understanding of (frontend) development
- Passion for building innovative products in the circular economy
- High standards and strive for excellence across the board - from own contributions to the collaborations with the engineering team - balanced by a practical understanding of the trade-offs between "done" and "perfect"
- Native / fluent written and verbal communication skills in German (must-have) and English
